Colorado Child and Family Investigators by County

Where the court-rostered investigators have their offices.

A Child and Family Investigator (CFI) is the neutral investigator a Colorado judge can appoint in a parenting case under C.R.S. § 14-10-116.5. The firm's statewide directory, compiled from the Colorado Judicial Branch roster, lists 155 listings in 21 Colorado counties plus 3 out-of-state investigators who serve Colorado remotely. Of the 155 listings, 112 accept state-paid appointments, 60 offer a sliding fee scale, and 26 are marked not accepting cases.

Using this list

A judge can also appoint an investigator whose office is in another county but who is rostered for the judicial district, so the full roster is wider than any county line. Before asking a court to appoint a particular investigator, check that the roster lists the person as accepting cases and rostered for your district. The firm does not endorse any investigator, and this sheet is general information, not legal advice.

If a CFI has been appointed in your case, the first dates are short: the CFI's disclosure is due within seven days of the appointment, and a party has seven days from the date of the disclosure to object. Attorney Liken is a court-rostered CFI and offers a free 20-minute call. Contacting the firm does not create an attorney-client relationship, so please do not send confidential case details until the firm confirms in writing that it represents you.
